New York, Nov. 25.—[Special.]—Jay Gould [illegible] told what he knew or knew what he pretended would help the public to get more [illegible] elevated railroads before the Court of Common Pleas. It was to-day brought by the Manhattan Elevated Road to get [illegible] agreement of Nov. 10, 1875, by which said the Manhattan Company [illegible] with the Metropolitan Company, [illegible] Gould was a director of the Metropolitan Company. Before them he had an interest or other [illegible] the roads, but at that time [illegible] stock was transferred to his name on the books in order to qualify him for election as a director. He then began to investigate the railroad affairs, got the name of the syndicate owning the control that the Manhattan Company had in the Metropolitan.

"I then consulted," said Mr. Gould, "Russell Sage, who was also a director of the Manhattan, when we met at dinner. We have some talk in the office. DEATH ON THE RAIL.

Fatal Train Passenger-Train Jumps the Track Eight Miles Out of Chicago.

Engineer Instantly Killed, the Conductor Probably Fatally Injured, and Others Hurt.

Another Has to a Broken Rail as to Some a Many Cause as Yet Great Spoil.

A serious accident, in which a locomotive was [illegible] the southbound accident and passenger [illegible] passed and several other persons [illegible] injured, occurred yesterday morning at Blaine, a station on the Grand Trunk Railway about nine miles from the city. The accident was on the Grand Trunk road, but the train which met with the disaster left the Dearborn station at 8:30 o'clock in the morning, and was made up of cars belonging to the Michigan Central, Pullman, and other roads. The engineer, [illegible] the fireman, and other members of the train crew were all employes of the Michigan Central road, and from the fact that the accident occurred on the Grand Trunk road it is evident that the responsibility cannot be placed at the door of the Michigan Central road

John Dove went to sleep at 11 p. m., and awoke at 4 a. m. to find a gale blowing and no steamer near his vessel. He kept the steamer's ensign several times, but at daylight saw himself drifting toward land and no steamer in sight. He had no trouble in getting ashore after he would work on the beach. The barge had four cows with it on board. Three of the bulls of her crew were observed drowned and crushed.

BANDALS AND FAILURES.

If the reports given by the Mobile (Ala.) Constitution for slandering in support of Cotton in opposition to Gandal continue a true statement of the relative attitude of these two gentlemen as to the tariff, the accommodating Democrats have no choice evidence to cause a victory in the Spoken city election. That journal says that "Lee "and Cotton both stand on the firm "Democratic platform, which advocates the "ample for the tariff conference in the Democratic Convention of New Jersey, South "Carolina, and Virginia," and also that both gentlemen have defined themselves as opposed to further agitation of the tariff question at the approaching session of Congress. If this be true, the Constitution is entirely correct in saying that there is no essential difference between the two candidates, and it chooses to support in Gandal, who especially represents metropolitan interests as against him as the able leader of Southern slave interests and society is necessary.

All this seems that the two factions of the Democratic party, organized to divorcing lines of protection and free trade, have agreed upon a truce not to judge the case till after the Presidential election, such an agreement is undoubtedly favorable to Gandal's prospects in the Democratic struggle, but it does also a more important significance. The acceptance of the "free platform" as the basis of compromise involves a much broader concession on the part of the protective Democrats. It was pointed out repeatedly during the Ohio campaign that the Democratic anti tariffists are numerically—indeed almost literally—the men on the position which had been adopted previously by the Republican Convention. It declared in favor of a tariff "re-adjusted to its application so as to encourage production in America at home and afford just compensation to labor." All the rest of the resolution was immaterial; the plank voted into both the substance and the spirit of the declaration. There was no expression of the tariff, no proof trade, or a tariff for revenue only. The sentiment there of protection was sustained altogether in favor of a direct policy "to encourage production to distributed home and afford just compensation to labor." That is the sentiment pleased up for giving expression to the rest of the professionals. It seems to us not difficult for Mr. Gandal to stand upon that platform; neither do we his protection friends expect or demand a more explicit declaration than this. That the Democrats are nothing more than a coalition of all further agitation of the tariff question for the present. But it is not easy to understand how Mr. Cotton and those of his supporters who profess to be sound on Lecompton can be content with his position, which, while it may be satisfactory on the surface, is universally understood to be a concession to the protection interests. Mr. Stephens, who is the head of the secession party, sing of his party and Cotton's principal supporter, accepts the situation as defined in this platform, and therefore I am to believe that Cotton has done the same.

If the Gandal struggle in Washington has taken the stage entitled to the Mobile Constitution, then to Lane left no particular concealment to the secret, and neither Mr. Cotton of Gandal nor the of Cotton will conceal the fact of a compromise on the tariff question. But circumstances and sentiment deny on the tariff will by this vote. Not only are the Atlanta Convention have directed all arrangements Cotton's position for the maintenance purport of defending him? A few days will tell. But it is certain that the Democratic party has neither the courage nor the capacity to grapple with the problem of revenue reform.

A PUBLIC OUTRAGE.

The entire population of England is in a state of excitement, and the Lancashire men, according to the London Spectator, fear with the deepest emotion of the time of the American Civil War, it is said to a worse state than it has previously been to since the re-peopled northern shore. Things are going on much the way in cotton manufacturing as in farming, with the important difference in favoring the Southern to the effect of American competition, but in the cotton best part it labors at the expense of a world-wide depression.

The England cotton manufacture is undergoing the most readjustment in the shape of new combinations. It has but its work properly, and the consequences are being pushed to the wall. Failures are common, but private settlements with creditors are still more frequent. Even the merchant were also positive, as to the Sunday dinner, as "almost heroism economy" and the fine days are sufficient, cannot make ends meet, and, with their capital lessening week by week, are even doing them in the face. There is, it is reported, hardly a town in the country where workers are not sitting in the streets and asking vainly for work. The depression in the value of automobile property is to be compared only with that in Cotton lands. Mills that cost $50,000 cannot be sold for $15,000, and those for which $100,000 will not now fetch more than $15,000.

It is sometimes that in doing of this, but it is towards competition, the most kind of competition that is starting up Southern farmers and coal mills. It has long been an American theme that the country which produced the bulk of the staple which England coaxes into textile should reach from that sooner the great price of manufacture to the cotton manufacturer, but it cannot be said that much has not been done to make it come true. The English manufacturer still fails to appreciate foreign competition in foreign markets, and this is quite properly taken to indicate that English manufacturers can still produce more cheaply than America any other country.

The depression in the cotton manufacture is declared to have its origin in over-speculation during the boom of cotton from the heat of 1860, but the depression is by no means confined to the cotton manufacture of England. It is felt through almost all the great industries of that country, and not through them alone, but with more or less severity through the industries of all the great civilized countries. Through them all the industries are to be seen that enough reason that the origin of the commercial movement given to cotton industry in the great inventions and discoveries of the last century or two has come to its term, and that the world is entering on a new phase of its industrial existence, which likewise accepts the spirit of self-help takes the place of the wonderful growth that has been accomplished under the direction of a progressive commercial demand.

If this be so, the competition between the manufacturers of each industry in a country is not only certain to have a severe intensity existence, which every one has at the moment he exists, but the competition between different nations for the control of the world's markets is to be fought into something like a close struggle of competition. Europe can now only to those who have exercise of capital, energy, and natural advantages. After the expenditure which manufacturers of England and the continental countries of America have lately carried out will come the next question: Are the world's markets to be controlled by the English or the American?

AN UNPOPULAR DEMOCRAT.

The Cincinnati Times, which is the chief and strongest Democratic paper in Ohio, in an article on "Democracies and Free Democracy," talks right out in meeting, and expresses its convictions with refreshing vigor and unconventionalness. Referring to such a bid for fame Washington has the political courage to sometimes look to the law to give them, and the process is not strong enough to compel freedom of speech in a Democratic editor by gets itself out to confine or subject his opinions. The sentiments of the Times, therefore, have the merit of being fresh, active, undisturbed, and as consequently have most of the elements of the actual forcible which, to handle to have a powerful influence with some astonishing persuasion.

The Times tells the to not the Democracy of the Cincinnati Gandal-Breckinridge Platform, that "the Democracy have not had such a confidence chance for years to exhibit actual judgment as it has by letting the Democratic interests of the county have that the county is not left to Democratic hands and is to Republican hands," and gives the following beautiful lunch:

If the Democrats can do no better than the Republicans who divide the county into a number of wards, and the County Commissioners who divide the county into a number of districts, and the Democrats can do no better than the Republicans who divide the county into a number of districts, and the Democrats can do no better than the Republicans who divide the county into a number of districts, and the Democrats can do no better than the Republicans

Elections of which are comparatively discussed. As Samuel Baker writes to the Times subject of the north, and each an attempt to address to Lower Egypt. Prosperous and loyal to-day, and a large force ought to succeed at Abu and a fortified station occupied on the Nile opposite Berber. I shall explain all other events and movements the Government forces on the Soudan district. The Dervishes ought to be able to march upon Khartoum, which they have already formed for sure to the anti-slavery column of the Soudan is necessary Suakin, via Berber line, where the water is bad and the natives. The Egyptian troops in approaching conditions are favorable for avoiding Indian troops across the desert from Suakin. Khartoum may be reached in ten days from the time of leaving Berber. The Government are determined to overcome the difficulties of the undertaking, and to make the expedition a success."

[Special Cable Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.] Mr. Gladstone's speech to-night, Chamberlain's reply to the Carlton Club speech, and Hartington's speech to-day at Bradford, which they are practically the Conservative platform for the coming election. The Conservatives are favorable for avoiding Irish coercion, and have not promised to oppose the Government's policy of local self-government for Ireland. The Liberals are divided on the question, and Gladstone's speech to-night is intended to reconcile the Parnellites to the Government's policy. Chamberlain's speech is a bid for the support of the Radicals, and Hartington's speech to-day is intended to reconcile the Liberal Unionists to the Government's policy. The Parnellites are not satisfied with the Government's policy, and will probably vote against it. The Liberal Unionists are divided on the question, and will probably vote for it. The Conservatives are united in favor of the Government's policy, and will vote for it

Abolition of Commissions by the Trunk Lines.

At a meeting of the Trunk-Line Executive Committee held in New York a few days ago, Mr. J. H. Ledyard, of the Michigan Central, offered the following resolution. He said that the Commissioners had been instructed by President Garrett, of the Baltimore & Ohio, to vote for their abolition at the last meeting of the Executive Committee held in New York Oct. 2, 1883, but the subject was not reached before the hour of adjournment arrived:

Whereas, The continuance of excessive rates, not only to the trade but to the railroads and their patronage alike, must be attributed principally to the existence of the Commissions, and the fact that the Trunk-line Executive Committee has been unable to maintain rates because of the refusal of the Commissioners to agree to any advance; and

Whereas, The Commissioners have failed to secure the co-operation of the Southern lines, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Western lines, except in a partial and unsatisfactory manner; and

Whereas, The Commissioners have failed to secure the co-operation of the Boards of Trade and other commercial organizations in the interior, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Boards of Trade of the seaboard cities, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Boards of Trade of the West, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Boards of Trade of Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and other Northwestern cities, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Boards of Trade of Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville, Indianapolis and other Southwestern cities, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Rock Island, and Burlington, the first three to confine themselves to the business between Chicago and the Missouri River, and the latter to the business between Chicago and St. Paul and the interior of Iowa, and have failed to secure the co-operation of the Northwestern lines, which is charged to exist in favor of the Northwestern lines, which is charged to exist in favor of the Northwestern lines, which is charged to exist in favor

Charles Adams and John Lynch (col.) yesterday morning on North Avenue, near Halsted street, had a scrap that for a moment or two was enough to set the air of a watch and chain and rear coat variation. Adams was arrested and held to the criminal court in $1,000 bail.

Much interest is manifested among the ladies of the various churches in the scheme of holding grab-bag fairs, by means of which it is the notion of the pastors to raise funds. The latest of the kind announced is that of the Centenary Methodist society, to be held in Hamilton Hall during the week beginning Dec. 3.

Yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 1,000 West Monroe street, Miss Jessie Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowen, was married to Mr. Albert Hall, of Boston, Mass. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Hamilton. The couple left on the evening train for Boston, where they will reside.

Mr. Albert Trowbridge, one of the old settlers of this city, yesterday celebrated his 80th birthday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. C. H. Dana, No. 1021 Michigan avenue. The old gentleman is hale and in fair prestige considering his age, and, however, to the great sorrow of his friends who came to congratulate him, among the nations were Rev. Charles De Garmo, and Maj. Swaine, of Michigan City, who have known Mr. Trowbridge since childhood.

The Chicago Bicycle Club held an informal meeting last evening in the clubhouse on Michigan avenue, near Jackson street, and about 100 members were in attendance. The business consisted of dining, initiations, speeches, etc. Three candidates were balloted on for membership, and were elected. The club is to have a monthly meeting hereafter, and the next one will be held on the first Monday evening in January.

Yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 1,000 West Monroe street, and also at the Church of the Epiphany, Miss Jessie Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowen, was married to Mr. Albert Hall, of Boston, Mass. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Hamilton. The couple left on the evening train for Boston, where they will reside.

Clarke's report of the meeting of the Young Men's Relief Charity association to devise some remedy on Mayor Harrison. While there are some members who wish to see the organization continued, the majority are decidedly inclined to see the matter left entirely to organized charities to suppress fraudulent applications for assistance on its part.

Tomorrow the Fourth-ave and cable will close at 6 p. m. for the day. The afternoon and night sales will close at that hour, and there will be no delivery and no collection of mail matter throughout the city. The public generally, and the merchants, manufacturers, Knights of Labor, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Honor, and all other societies and associations will observe closed during the latter day.

The dead body of a woman sitting bolt upright in an old trunk at the foot of Erie street was discovered yesterday. She had evidently died while sitting thus in the trunk. The body, which was covered in the dampness, is that of a woman about 40 years old, of light complexion, with dark hair and eyes. Coroner Dietzsch will hold an inquest over the remains this morning. On the second finger of the left hand was a gold ring.

The stockholders of the National Paperware Company, who own the patents of the "Bottle of Lasting Odor" and the building at the corner of Walnut street and Hatbrick court, met yesterday and elected the following Directors: Charles L. Wainwright, J. H. Wilson, Charles Hoppin, Augustus Smith, E. J. Sullivan, Edward Smith, L. Mayo, Edward Hamilton, and Charles Bonnell. Officers will be elected next Dec. 1.

The Lincoln Park Commissioners signed a number of bids for asphalt, stone, and sewer pavements, one of which is to pay grant to put down on Clark street from Fort avenue to Center street, a distance of 4,000 feet. No action was taken, as the last pavement in the city sought, and the Commissioners will refer up their minds on the point during the week. The contract with C. C. Badger for lighting the park with electricity was signed. The cost is $75 a month, or $10 less than the Gaslight and Coke Company agreed to lower it to at the city expense to time of the contract for lighting purposes, the board to furnish the "juice." There was some talk about lighting the Lake Park drive, and several parties were on hand to put in the best bids of that section on the contract.

UNDERTAKERS' MEETING.

A number of gentlemen connected of the Grand Pacific Hotel last evening for the purpose of organizing the Undertakers' Benefit of Chicago, among those being: D. S. Pearsons, Henry W. King, William Henry W. A. Pearsons, Jacob Sexton, Willis J. Long, D. D. Lounsbury, S. C. Dunn, and J. F. Rose. Mr. Pearsons was elected President, C. H. Sexton, Vice-President, George Rose, Secretary, W. J. Hughes Executive Committee, and Messrs. Sexton, Long, and Lounsbury Executive Committee. A constitution was adopted, another meeting will be held when the committee on by-laws will be ready to report. The purpose of the Society, which has been chartered by the Legislature, will be the amelioration of trouble.

DIVORCE ON A QUIRK.

Gilbert and Samuel Cox, two of the Pa-Cook tribe have been having their family troubles and were also in Recorder's Court yesterday. Samuel, it appears, had married Gilbert's wife, and the latter, in a fit of jealousy, had threatened to kill his brother. Samuel, in fear of his life, had sued for a divorce, and Gilbert, in order to prevent the granting of the decree, had sued for an injunction restraining Samuel from marrying the woman. Judge Moran, after hearing the evidence, decided that Samuel was entitled to the decree, and refused to grant the injunction. Gilbert, who was present, was then informed that he was in contempt of court in threatening his brother's life, and was fined $100 and costs. He paid the money, and left the court-room a sadder and wiser man.

CITY HALL.

Gen. Lick was drawing the water-melon premium for the locals on Taylor street, formerly occupied by old Frank Lawler, the low-wine keeping quit the account yesterday.

Ald. Masters introduced an order in the Council Monday night asking the Commissioner of Public Works to what authority the grant pursuant to South Water, Dearborn, and State streets had been torn up. The Commissioner replied yesterday that it was due to the men in the employ of the Chicagoan Gas Company, and without any authority whatever. The company, he said, disregarded all instructions of the Board, and the men in charge of the work having been fined, and the company refusing to make necessary repairs, the Board was compelled to have the work done by the city. The matter was referred to the Committee on Gas, Oil, and Electric Lights.

From present indications it would appear that the Exposition matter is not settled yet. Col. Cleary, the author of the original ordinance requiring the company to pay a bond of $10,000, is very much opposed to the recommendation by the Finance Committee of a reduction to $500. He will be right in fighting to accept these terms if he does, for they are simply ridiculous. The company could pay the bond out of the interest on the money in the bank without touching the principal. The bond is given to guarantee the city from loss in case the company fails to pay the cost of paving laid by the city. The $500 ordinance further permits the company to pay the bond in monthly installments, which would be a farce. The Exposition Company is worth a million or two, and should be made to put up the money.

LOCAL BULLETIN.

The Cook County Democratic Club met at its new quarters, No. 104 Monroe street, last evening, to open the rooms, as the Joseph Medill Social Science Association [illegible] got tangled that program was the reading of a report from the Executive Committee relative to the fitting up of the clubrooms, and which was a sort of congratulatory affair. Some twenty members of the club were present, and after the reading of the report the meeting adjourned.
